Elizabeth Hart and Iris Richter discussing conflicts of interest in vaccination policy

Elizabeth Hart chats with Iris Richter about the over-use of vaccine products and conflicts of interest in vaccination policy, this is a multi-billion dollar industry. Elizabeth started investigating over-vaccination of pets in 2008, and this has now led to her investigating over-vaccination of people, children in particular are grossly over-vaccinated with lucrative vaccine products.

Elizabeth is challenging the increasing number of questionable vaccines and repeat vaccinations being foisted upon children, adults and animals by the booming vaccine industry. There's a 'big picture' on lucrative over-vaccination which needs to be exposed, including the influence of the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, and the World Health Organisation being used as a front for the vaccine industry. The influence of the Murdoch media (via News Corp Australia and the Murdoch Children's Research Institute) on coercive vaccination policy in Australia, i.e. the No Jab, No Pay/No Play laws, is a major scandal that must be exposed.

This is all coming to a head now with the current covid situation, and with fast-tracked experimental covid-19 injections being pressed upon the entire global population, against a virus which isn't a threat to most people. What is going on?

See transcript of Elizabeth and Iris's discussion below:

Iris Richter:

Hello and welcome to Tassie Tiger Talks. I'm joined today by Elizabeth Hart. Elizabeth has investigated vaccination politics and policies in Australia for quite a few years. And I think she's actually coined a new term, over-vaccination. And with that I better give the word to you, Elizabeth. Introduce yourself, please. Thank you for joining us.

Elizabeth Hart:

Hello Iris. Yes, I've been investigating vaccination now for the past 12 years. I started off with pet vaccination. I used to get my dogs vaccinated regularly every year, as recommended by the vet. And then one year, one of my dogs became very ill and they put her down because they couldn't fix her. And then I subsequently found out that dogs were being grossly over-vaccinated. They were being vaccinated every year with modified live virus vaccines and inactivated vaccines. And I started investigating this and lobbying about it, contacted the Australian Veterinary Association and the regulator, the Australian Pesticides and Veterinary Medicines Authority. Got a lot of attention for this. The APVMA had a meeting to discuss the issue and put out a position statement. The AVA had to address their vaccination policy as well, about decreasing vaccination of pets.

Elizabeth Hart:

So it caused a bit of a splash. We got a bit of media, all the major papers covered it, and Choice magazine. So it was recognized that pets were being grossly over-vaccinated. And that's very interesting to consider in regards to human vaccination, because specialists in pet vaccination were warning, "We have to decrease the vaccination of pets to minimize the risk of adverse reactions." And now we're seeing vaccination of humans is going through the roof! We just... Enormous amount of vaccines. And this doesn't seem to be talked about. There are just so many vaccine products being pressed upon people now, and now we're seeing the absolutely most audacious plan ever to vaccinate the entire world with covid vaccines. Amazing.

Iris Richter:

Yeah. And it's not just vaccines. It's actually something that a lot of people find very concerning because it changes your phenotype expression. It makes your body make different proteins, genetically modified proteins, essentially. It's a very new technology and people don't really know what they're getting into. And nobody could possibly know, because no studies have been done for long enough, have they?

Elizabeth Hart:

Well that's right. I mean, I don't claim to have any expertise in the vaccine products, but I'm looking at the sheer number of vaccine products that have been pressed upon the community now. I've been trying to raise questions about this with the Australian government for the past eight years, at least, because there are so many vaccines on the schedule now, particularly for children, and repeat vaccinations. And there are problems with other vaccines as well, with the aluminium-adjuvanted vaccines, multiple doses of the measles, mumps, rubella vaccines (MMR).

Elizabeth Hart:

These are questions that we should be able to ask, but something has come in the last few years where we're hindered from asking questions. And anybody who asks questions is instantly just labelled 'anti-vaxxer'. It's really a shocking thing that we can't ask questions about taxpayer-funded vaccination policy. It's really serious, and I think the covid vaccine situation is bringing this to the fore, that we must demand a look at taxpayer-funded vaccination policy, because it is really getting completely out of hand now. And people have no idea of the conflicts of interest that surround this area.

Iris Richter:

Yeah. So you have looked a lot at the conflicts of interest in vaccination policy, haven't you?

Elizabeth Hart:

Yes. Well, the people who are making the decisions on vaccination policy, a lot of them have conflicts of interest. You've got the Australian Technical Advisory Group on Immunisation. A few years ago, that was headed by Terry Nolan. And he is involved with the Murdoch Children's Research Institute. And a lot of people probably don't realize that that institute, that's involved with vaccine research, but it's involved with the Murdochs. Rupert Murdoch's mother, Dame Elisabeth Murdoch, she was involved with the founding of that institute. And Sarah Murdoch, Lachlan Murdoch's partner, she's on the board of the institute. and she's also the global ambassador for the institute. Now that organization is involved with vaccination research, including covid vaccines. But at the same time, we have Murdoch publications, such as The Australian and the tabloids, like The Daily Telegraph, are constantly putting out articles promoting vaccines.

Elizabeth Hart:

And it's particularly interesting to look at the No Jab, No Pay law, and No Play laws in the states. That was originally campaigned for by the Murdoch newspapers. Now they have a massive conflict of interest. They've got an institute that's involved in vaccine research, and at the same time using their media to influence the public and influence politicians about vaccination policy. And as a result of their No Jab, No Pay/Play campaign, we now have these coercive vaccination laws.

Elizabeth Hart:

Now, many people will say that children need to be vaccinated, but we need to look at the schedule because the number of vaccines is growing out of sight. And there is just so little transparency. And so many people who are involved with looking at the policy, are involved with vaccine companies. For example, Terry Nolan at the Murdoch Children's Research Institute, they were getting funding from vaccine companies.

Elizabeth Hart:

So this is an area that needs to be investigated. And the problem you have, you'd expect the ABC or SBS, that's the taxpayer-funded broadcaster, they should be looking into this, but they simply won't do it. I've been writing to them for years that we need to look at this taxpayer-funded vaccination policy, and they simply won't do it. They're now just a propaganda arm of the government, which seems to be in bed with the pharmaceutical industry. And we're crying out for some exposure of this.

Elizabeth Hart:

It's really serious now. And as I say, the covid situation is bringing this to the fore, because now we are seeing that covid vaccines are being pressed on young people. Young people are not at risk for covid and yet they're being pressed to have these vaccine products. They've got their own natural innate immunity to this. They do not need these products. And we don't know what damage it might cause for them in the future. If they get put on this hurdy-gurdy of having covid vaccines every year, which is the plan, who knows what that might do to their natural immune response.

Elizabeth Hart:

So we need to look at this, but this area is just completely dominated by academics who are completely wedded to the idea of vaccination, and simply won't discuss it. It's very difficult for people like us to get a voice, because we're censored all the time, or labelled as anti-vax. What are we going to do about this?

Iris Richter:

Yeah, it's very difficult, I know. I uploaded an interview the other day with Reiner Fuellmich and it was deleted before it even was ready to be played.

Elizabeth Hart:

I mean that's astonishing, isn't it? That YouTube, Facebook is taking... They're taking it upon themselves to just delete anybody. We're supposed to be living in liberal democracies where we can discuss things. That's how progress is made, where people freely talk about things. And yet they are just dismissing everything and deleting things. It's the most frightening situation.

Elizabeth Hart:

This last year has been the most horrific situation to watch unfold in our political systems. I've been experiencing this difficulty with talking about vaccines for the past 12 years, but it is now really coming to the fore that this is beyond serious, that we have to demand a voice. These people are elected representatives, people like Scott Morrison, Greg Hunt, they've been elected by the people. And yet they've got this paternalistic, patronising attitude that, "You will do this, and you will do that." And the same with the state premiers. They're dictating to us now like masters, instead of being our servants to the people. They're not being accountable.

Elizabeth Hart:

And I'm feeling that these governments are illegitimate. They're illegitimate governments because they are refusing to be accountable to the people. And now we have this push for vaccine passports, that we'll even have to need passports to go interstate. There's a real threat, you know, Jane Halton is a person who is advising Scott Morrison. She's involved with an organization called CEPI, which was originally set up along with Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, which is everywhere across vaccination policy. She is an advisor to Scott Morrison and she was saying, they should use the No Jab, No Play laws to make adults bend down and have these vaccines, the covid vaccines. So we've got just these massive amount of conflicts of interest, and the people are being scared and terrified about this virus. So much fear-mongering is going on, a lot of it coming through the Murdoch press, beating up the risk with these vaccines.

Elizabeth Hart:

There's so many question marks over all of the data to do with this situation, particularly the 'cases'. And as you know, speaking to Reiner Fuellmich the other day, this PCR testing, massive question mark over this. This whole pandemic seems to have been built on this house of cards, which is the PCR testing. And the way that deaths have been allocated towards covid. We've got to question that. As Reiner was saying the other day, or somebody else was saying the other day, the 28 days... 28 days after having a PCR test a person dies, their death is attributed to covid. (This is in the UK.) Now this is just beyond ridiculous, really. We need independent objective analysis of what's going on.

Elizabeth Hart:

The situation in England is...that's really the heart of this, I find. Because it was England where this idea came from, particularly the idea of lockdowns and social distancing. It was the Ferguson Report, a report put out by Neil Ferguson of Imperial College, London. That was the report that really pushed this social distancing. And that was taken up in Australia by the Doherty Institute, by researchers at the Doherty Institute, who did modelling. And that's what put Australia into lockdown. And I think it's had influence around the world, including in the US.

Elizabeth Hart:

So now we have got to go back and start doing retrospective analysis of what's happened here, how has all this come to pass? And look back and see what's happened. And it's amazing that that report has had a major part to play in this, the major part. And now we have to start demanding accountability for this.

Iris Richter:

Yeah. Speaking of the UK, I've come across this website from the UK government that says covid, isn't being considered a high consequence infectious disease. This is like from May or June, 2020, but they're still keeping all the measures up to comply with the World Health Organization's PHEIC, the Public Health Emergency of International Concern. And I thought this is very interesting.

Iris Richter:

And also looking from Tasmania here, we're this little island state with half a million people population. We had 13 very elderly people die, supposedly of covid or with covid. And we haven't had a single case in the last 11 months, since the 12th of June last year. And yet we have extended our state of emergency just recently on the 6th of May. And I'm wondering, what is the actual underlying reason? Because I read through all these acts. And besides that I read in the end of the act is that all the people who make these decisions to have these acts are, or under these acts, are exempt from liability, as long as they act in good faith.

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah. There's something going on, isn't there? Where did these emergency...

Iris Richter:

[crosstalk 00:11:42].

Elizabeth Hart:

But where did these emergency laws come from? That was the bewildering thing last year wasn't it? These emergency laws. And we've got no say. The politicians just went AWOL. They weren't answering to us anymore. All of a sudden this emergency law was running the whole show, which they just keep extending and extending every three months, they just keep extending it. Where did they come from? This isn't a liberal democracy with this sort of thing going on. And then the Biosecurity Act, Biosecurity Act 2015, that Federal Act, which...2015, this has been in the works for a long time. And in that Act, it has got the capacity to fine people $66,600 and/or a five-year imprisonment term, for people who might refuse vaccination or other demands by the Chief Medical Officer. That is amazing. Who put that together? Why wasn't something so mega put to the Australian people to think about this?

Elizabeth Hart:

We've got things happening in the parliament, bills being put forward in the parliament, like No Jab, No Pay. These things are just getting pushed through, and the general public has no idea of the consequences of these things. Our system, our political system is in serious trouble. This is not working for us. We need to look at this, this is a whole big picture that we need to be looking at here, to see how we've arrived at this situation. And then you also mentioned about the HCID stuff in England. Yeah, that's fascinating. I was looking at that. I was gobsmacked when I found that out. Really? They had taken that away, and yet this thing has been built up in England and beaten up so much, and going on about all the deaths, but we've got to question those deaths.

Elizabeth Hart:

A lot of these deaths are in elderly people with co-morbidities, who were people who were going to die anyway. And now that's not discounting the fact that people will die, but people do die. In the world, we can expect that 59 million people will die every year. There's about 7.9 billion people in the world. So far, according to Statista, about 3.3 million people have died attributed to covid over the past 15 months. That's not just a year, that's 15 months. That's a mere fraction of people. That's almost expected deaths. There was something really weird going on here about the way these death numbers have been beaten up in countries like... Not in Australia, because they supposedly kept them down, but it depends on how you count these things, doesn't it? But in the UK and the US, the way these deaths have been attributed to covid, we really have to demand an investigation into how this has happened.

Elizabeth Hart:

There is something very, very odd going on. We also have to find out what's going on with the influence of the World Economic Forum, that leaders in countries, like Scott Morrison and Justin Trudeau and Biden in America, using these terms that the World Economic Forum uses, 'Build Back Better' and 'the New Normal'. What's going on here? Are they now working with the World Economic Forum? They're supposed to be serving us, the people in their own countries. It wasn't put forward in the election that these people were working with the World Economic Forum. We haven't elected them to do these things. So this is a big issue that has to be investigated. Who's running the place now?

Elizabeth Hart:

It's opening up so many things for us to think about. And the general public is clueless about this, because we are missing a major central part in our liberal democracy, and that is an effective fourth estate. We do not have a media that is working on our behalf to shine a light in dark corners and check what's going on in government. The media in this country is just absolutely dire. Well, I've already explained about the Murdoch media, who is just absolutely conflicted in this area. And the Murdochs have got so much power over politicians. Kevin Rudd came out just a little while ago just saying what a frightening beast of the Murdoch media, that the politicians are in thrall to the Murdochs. They're supposed to be in thrall to us, the people who elected them.

Elizabeth Hart:

So this is beyond serious. We've got Nine Entertainment, which is The Sydney Morning Herald and The Age, they've all been just pro, pro, pro, beating up the fear about covid. The ABC and the SBS are absolutely full on about beating up the fear and promoting the vaccine products, not providing us with any analysis.

Elizabeth Hart:

This whole area has been shut down, and this media is like a propaganda machine, just something straight out of Orwell. And the same thing in England. The BBC in England, it's something that's been really noticeable that's been happening over the past few years, the way the BBC, the ABC, they're just not operating in a way that's working to the benefit of the people. It's really serious. In England you've got papers like The Telegraph, which is regarded as the conservative paper. You've got the Guardian, which is to the left, and you've got the BBC. Each of those organizations has received funding from Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation.

Elizabeth Hart:

The Bill & Melinda Gates foundation has just been buying up all this authority to speak through the media. And of course it's not getting any heat itself, because it's protected. Now, we've got a major serious issues happening here, and the people who are asleep, they don't realize what's going on.

Elizabeth Hart:

And in England, a book has come out just recently called The State of Fear, describing how the English population was cowed with fear by this virus, thanks to the group called SAGE, which is advising the Johnson government. This is a group of academics, large group, including Neil Ferguson. And they have been calling the shots on what's happening with the covid and the lockdowns, all of these draconian measures. The things that they have done over there... And they've been deliberately trying to frighten the public to terrify them, to do exactly as they are told.

Elizabeth Hart:

We need a massive investigation into this, but who can we trust to do it? The whole system seems to be completely corrupted. What do you do with this?

Iris Richter:

Yes, it's financial incentives and incentives altogether, but mainly financial all along the way. So we're taking the taxpayer money out of the people, and then we give it to the pharmaceutical companies, and we incentivise any positive diagnosis, or someone has covid on a death certificate, there's lots of money to be had for a hospital. I mean, there's obviously conflicts of interest everywhere. Or doctors are getting paid for vaccination, but they're not getting paid for reporting adverse events.

Elizabeth Hart:

Well, that's right. And there's been a massive transfer of wealth with this covid situation. We don't know what's going on with... Small businesses have been shut down. Does this mean that powerful organisations can swoop in and buy those things up for cheap prices? Think of the amount of money that's being made out of this testing. This testing is just incredible. I mean, even in Australia, millions and millions of tests have been done, testing people who aren't even sick.

Elizabeth Hart:

This whole situation of making everybody feel like they're sick, this covid thing has been hanging over all of our lives for now, nearly one and a half years. This has been hanging over our lives. We just want to get on with our lives, but they've created this fear, and we're all made to feel like that we're sick or we're carriers. It's this grotesque medicalisation of society that is going on. It's the medical industrial complex has just taken us over. And it's not just about the vaccines, people on antidepressants, opioids.

Elizabeth Hart:

The doctors are a major problem in this. We cannot trust the doctors anymore. They are just pumping out products, left, right and centre, hooking people onto all sorts of drugs. And they've seen this vaccine schedule for children, particularly, and increasingly adults. Adults are in the frame for more and more vaccines, shingles, annual flu vaccines, pneumococcal, now covid. This schedule is blowing out, and the doctors are just letting it happen. Not only letting it happen, we've got the AMA president now, Omar Khorshid, he's now pushing and pushing the vaccines, and pushing them for young people. That was published in The Australian today, that he is promoting these vaccines for young people.

Elizabeth Hart:

And I tried to submit a comment on The Australian today, tackling him about this. And my comment is censored. This is a major problem in Australia, that people are hindered from participating in public discussion on these very important issues, that we're just facing censorship. So we're facing it internationally on the media platforms, on the internet platforms, and also in Australia, they just keep shutting out people who've got valid things to say about what's happening with vaccination policy and also other medical issues. It's just dominated by vested interests. The whole situation is corrupt. We're in a dire situation.

Iris Richter:

Yeah, that's right. And coming back to the legislation, and they rolled it out so quickly, it was obvious that this was already drafted. Because nobody could possibly write legislation that quickly, one determination after the other. And in Germany, it was actually some court cases where these orders were called not valid law, because they're changed so often. Because how is anyone meant to keep up with it? Even the police aren't quite sure what you have to do at any given point in time.

Elizabeth Hart:

Well, who do you turn to here? Particularly last year, I was just sitting, my gob hanging open all the time. I was gobsmacked. I just, I can't believe this is happening. I've got nowhere to turn. The government has just given us away, they're not responding. You write letters to these people and they would just send you form letters back if they answered you at all. They have just completely forsaken us. It was like, we've got no rights anymore. This has been a massive coup that's happened, right in front of us. Nowhere to turn. Where was the judiciary? We've just got nobody here. We've got no checks and balances to protect us. This was just, they just swept in and did this, it is the most amazing situation. I still don't really know where to turn.

Elizabeth Hart:

Now what I'm trying to do, I'm writing to the Federal President of the Liberal Party to... Because these people, like Morrison and Hunt, are using the Liberal Party as their platform to get into government. And as the government won't be accountable, I'm going to the Liberal Party to say, "You're backing these people. I want to get accountability from somebody." So I'm just putting them in the frame. I'm writing to him, I'm copying in whole swathes of people, the State premiers, people like Malcolm Roberts and Pauline Hanson, Craig Kelly, a variety of people. I added Khorshid today to the list, just putting them all in the picture that people are questioning this, that they're just getting away with riding roughshod all over us.

Elizabeth Hart:

And there are so many people out in the community who are supporting what they're doing, because those people are not being properly informed. They are getting informed by a biased press, which is not giving them the whole picture and is not giving them any investigative journalism. It's amazing what's happening, just absolutely shocking. And we've got to find some way to push back on this.

Iris Richter:

Yeah, that's right. It's like a prime example of how mass hypnosis actually works.

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah.

Iris Richter:

"Let us terrorize and traumatise the entire world."

Elizabeth Hart:

It's a 'great beguiling' that has happened. It's the most, it's the biggest scandal in history! And so many people have been taken in by it. There are people like you and I dotted all over the world, who see this happening, and we're sort of standing in amazement that so many other people aren't getting this. And there's just so much apathy. And they don't realize what is at stake. It's not just about financials. It's not just putting these products on us. It's about our freedom, that they can just call... Look what's happening in Victoria at the moment with a couple of 'cases'. People have been masked up again, the restrictions are coming back in.

Elizabeth Hart:

If there is this virus out there, they should have just managed this, looked after the people who are at risk. So many people are not at risk with this virus, but we don't know now what's going to happen. This is the really scary thing, they have pushed out all of these vaccine products, millions and millions of doses. Who knows what that's going to do. We've no idea what's going to happen now. This is the most irresponsible thing that has ever happened.

Elizabeth Hart:

And I'm really focusing on the UK in this, because they led this. I can hardly believe that, I think nearly 40 million people have had at least one dose of vaccine in the UK, that all of these people had been taken to this. That's going to be a lot of young people, because they were focusing on people who were in the medical side of things, in hospitals and everything. And so a lot of those people would have been young. A lot of those people probably already had exposure. They probably already coped with the virus. And now they've been vaccinated. Now what are they being set up for? Are they going to be vaccinated every year of their life? What happens if they stop vaccinating? Nobody knows, because these mRNA vaccines, this is all a whole new ball game, that they could have rolled this out to the mass population...

Elizabeth Hart:

They could have just given it out to people who were at risk, but to spread this to everybody, to plan to be vaccinating babies even, without knowing what's going to happen in the future... We've got to sheet this home to who did it... And who pushed this from the very beginning? Who pushed it? Bill Gates. Bill Gates was the figurehead in pushing for these covid vaccines. He was leading the whole charge. He's in bed with Boris Johnson. Boris Johnson dances to his tune, and Macron in Europe. He's been running the show for years.

Elizabeth Hart:

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation is one of the main funders of the World Health Organization, along with Gavi, which is an organisation that they set up. And then the other main funders are vaccine-producing countries, like the UK and the US and Germany. So you have the WHO, the WHO is basically a front for the vaccine industry. And yet it has all this, "Oh, the WHO says this, and the WHO says that." Who is the WHO, exactly, to be dictating on this? And we need accountability for them.

Elizabeth Hart:

People just don't realise that the WHO is dominated by the vaccine industry, and Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. We've got to check. They've been dominating international policy now for years. There are so many people on their gravy train, these academics... One of our major enemies, apart from 'our own governments' being our enemy, the other major enemy is the universities and academics. These places are inhabited by people who are on research grants. They're dependent on funding from the vaccine industry, pharmaceutical industry. They're just locked into what they're doing. They've been hijacked by these sort of things. And we're suffering because they're dominating the conversation. And they are dominating policy.

Elizabeth Hart:

We've got an organization in Australia, the Immunisation Coalition. This coalition is funded by the vaccine industry, by Pfizer, by CSL Seqirus, by Glaxo, by Sanofi, by Merck. It's funded by them. And Google actually, because Google is very much into all this 'health stuff'. So this organisation is dominated by the vaccine industry and yet so many of its members, people like Raina MacIntyre and Robert Booy and Mary-Louise McLaws and Katie Attwell. They are getting given platforms in the media all the time, using their professional affiliations and their university credentials to talk about vaccines in this aggressive way, but never disclosing that they are tied up with an organisation which is funded by the vaccine industry.

Elizabeth Hart:

They don't disclose their conflicts of interest. And these people are highly influential on policy, by what they are doing in these universities. And the public doesn't realise just how many conflicts of interests there are. The Immunisation Commission has to be investigated for the influence it has exerted over policy. Because there's a massive network of these people. So it's in Australia, and then it spreads out. People involved with the World Health Organization, they're networking with the people in the UK. There's a massive network that has to be investigated, that is controlling all of this, and it has to be exposed so that people know what's going on, that these blessed vaccine products... There's just so many of them now, and we have no idea of the long-term consequences of being vaccinated over and over and over again.

Iris Richter:

So to answer your question, where does the Biosecurity Act come from, I'm here in the Biosecurity Act, and under Number Four, Objects of This Act, that's besides managing biosecurity risk, "... is to give effect to Australia's international rights and obligations, including under the international WHO's regulations." So that's the one central document by the World Health Organization that requires all 196 signatory countries, all the countries that have now covid response plan, I suppose-

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah.

Iris Richter:

... to have this response, because there is a PHEIC declared by the world health organization, which as you said, is funded up to 20% by Bill Gates and related companies, I think.

Elizabeth Hart:

So Reiner Fuellmich's investigating this isn't he? This whole network with the WHO and-

Iris Richter:

I don't think that he's focusing all that much on it, and I wish he would more, but I'm definitely looking at that. But he has [crosstalk 00:29:19]

Elizabeth Hart:

I've heard him mention it in one of the videos. I know the PCR thing's a big thing for him, but this manipulation of the WHO, this is huge.

Iris Richter:

Yeah, well it's actually... Our government never had... According to one of the witnesses that Reiner Fuellmich interviewed, Dr. Sylvia [Barend 00:29:35], and another professor, Anita [Stickleberger 00:29:40], both of these ladies had worked on the World Health Organization laws and rights. And they said the signatory countries said that the people who signed the contract never had the power to sign the contract.

Elizabeth Hart:

Wow. So there's just a lot to be checked into, isn't there? And for what's going on at the moment, wow, it's just so huge, what is going on at the moment. Who are we going to turn to, to expose all of that? I mean, there are lots of people trying to speak out about this, but they're getting censored all the time. Facebook and YouTube is just, as you say, taking Reiner Fuellmich off. I mean, goodness gracious.

Iris Richter:

Well I think we have the court of public opinion where we're right now. Fighting that right now. And we have the court of law-

Elizabeth Hart:

But the public just doesn't know.

Iris Richter:

... and we're probably going to have to go there.

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah.

Iris Richter:

And logic will have to win in the end. This is a total insanity, everything's upside down. The whole year we were here from the start, like the old robots, "Only a vaccine can bring us back to normal. Then there will never be the old normal again, it will be a new normal, only after a vaccine." Repetitive. And did you ever hear about the immune system? Did you ever hear about strengthening your innate immunity?

Elizabeth Hart:

And vitamin D. They've wanted to suppress vitamin D.

Iris Richter:

And the other thing is this whole... I'm not responsible for my neighbour's health. Sorry. I'm responsible for my health, and my children's health until they're grown up. But this whole concept of public health doesn't work, because health is very dependent on your individual lifestyle, and what happened in your life. And if you've been eating a junk food diet your whole life, then you're probably more likely to get sick from any disease. And it's not your neighbour's fault.

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah. It's an individual responsibility to do what you have to do. That's what's to be promoted. They're saying that overweight people can be at risk of covid. Well, lose weight. But to expect that every single person is going to now have to take a vaccine every year with unknown consequences... What happens if they stop the vaccines? What happens if they make people reliant upon these vaccines, and then they just stop them. That's quite an enormous power to have. These vaccines could be used as a weapon, make people reliant on the vaccines and then say, "Oh, we can't make them anymore. You're not going to have them."

Elizabeth Hart:

There's all of these things, ethical questions that have to be looked into. But to be pushing vaccine products on people who do not need them, when they've admitted this themselves, that most people under 70 are not at risk with this virus... Where they should be promoting treatments... They've actually suppressed treatments to actually help people. That is horrific. That's almost... That's murder.

Elizabeth Hart:

Because they wanted the vaccine products out under emergency authorisations that they weren't... Otherwise, those vaccines weren't going to get out there. They had to suppress the products, because if the products were known, they wouldn't have had an excuse to put the vaccines out there under an emergency situation. So that is a massive, massive scandal.

Elizabeth Hart:

I think Peter McCullough, Dr Peter McCullough has been highlighting things like this, about the treatments being suppressed, and lots of people, obviously, lots of doctors. And they've been shut down to talk about this. That they've been... I think Dr. McCullough was saying that people in America, they were being told not to treat people for quite a while, and then put them on a ventilator. I mean, that's just appalling.

Elizabeth Hart:

And I think the TGA in Australia has actively suppressed treatments. Wow. If this was a genuine emergency and you really wanted to do the right thing, it'd be all stops out to do everything you can to respond. But no, this has always been about 'the vaccine'. From the very beginning, this has been about 'the vaccine'. That Ferguson report was published in March. On the 13th of March in the UK, they were planning on a natural herd immunity response. And just within a day or so, they did a 180-degree turn around. And all of a sudden, it was talking about lockdown, social distancing, and that Ferguson report dated 16th of March, it was saying how these suppression strategies would have to be in place 'until the vaccine is ready'. And in that report, they said about 18 months. But as it turned out, the vaccines were rushed out, rushed out in about six months. That's amazing, to be able to rush out these new vaccine products, including the mRNA products, within six months. What is going on here?

Elizabeth Hart:

And there's something really interesting. I'm trying to remember the name of, but one of the people who was involved with the Oxford AstraZeneca vaccine... I'm just going by memory now, I think it's Adrian Hill. He was quoted in the UK Telegraph, and I think it was about May last year. And he was lamenting the fact that the virus was going. As if the virus was going to go before the vaccines were ready. And so do you think they were trying to rush these vaccines out so that they could justify trying to say that we've got to get these vaccines out there? How shocking would that be, if it's turned out that the virus was going, and they rushed the vaccines out, with the idea of getting the whole global population hooked on vaccines forever, and earning trillions of dollars for the pharmaceutical companies and their investors. Wow! So much to be looked into here.

Iris Richter:

Yeah. That's what happened with the Spanish flu actually, there was variants, and obviously they never had a vaccine, and the variants actually marked the beginning of the end.

Elizabeth Hart:

Right.

Iris Richter:

And then it just faded away, it disappeared. I mean, we're talking about a time where there was war going on, widespread poverty, starvation, crowded living, low hygiene, and still, it disappeared by itself.

Elizabeth Hart:

But you know, there's something very interesting. Somebody sent me a letter a few years ago. This was a letter from Private Bugden to his sister. And it was dated 1916. 1916, that's really interesting. And he was in a camp in Australia. This must have been before going overseas. He's in the camp in Australia, writing to his sister about what was happening. And one of the things he said, "We had to stop vaccinating because it was causing too much sickness." Now that's an interesting aside, isn't it, to find out what was going on there. That was 1916, and vaccinating. Just very interesting things to look at, but as you say, these viruses come and go, naturally. And they could have done so much to help people who were at risk. But instead of that, they've just tried to upend the whole of society. They've done the worst approach, the most grossly disproportionate and ill-targeted response they could have done, because they just wanted the excuse to have a vaccine response. That's what it seems like to me.

Elizabeth Hart:

And I think it's very interesting to think back to 2011, 2012. That's when it emerged that the US NIH, NIAID, headed by Anthony Fauci, that's when it emerged that that group was funding research into making viruses more transmissible. It was H5N1, bird flu. And there were two groups, one was led by Ron Fouchier, and another one was run by... It was a Japanese name, Kawaoka, or something like that. But these two projects were being funded by the NIAID to make the flu virus more transmissible. How amazing is that? And Fouchier, he presented at a conference around that time. And he was showing off how he had created this virus that was more deadly by transmitting it through ferrets. And this caused a furore in the science community. There was a big backlash, and then they had to have a moratorium on that research.

Elizabeth Hart:

But you just think the American government was funding research into making the flu virus more transmissible. Now I wrote letters at the time complaining about this, saying, "Is this contravening the Biological Weapons Convention, that you're actually trying to deliberately manipulate these viruses?" And then it's interesting, in the end, after all the hoo-ha, Fouchier did a 180-degree turnaround and then said his virus wasn't so deadly after all.

Elizabeth Hart:

Do you think, what was going on there that they were beating this up? They were beating this up for the vaccine industry. And there was a paper came out, I think his name was Rino Rappuoli, and he put out a paper talking about vaccinating the whole global population, 7 billion people. The WHO had put out a report... These seasonal flu vaccines that we get, you know the primary reason why we get them? Because they were saying, we need the infrastructure in place so that if there is ever a pandemic, that the infrastructure is there for the vaccines. Not so much that people need to be having these vaccines every year, that it's the infrastructure was put in place.

Elizabeth Hart:

So you see, they have been plotting and planning, creating this massive vaccine industry. At that time we were thinking about flu. And now they've gone ahead with this coronavirus. All these years we've been around, and all of a sudden we all have to have coronavirus vaccines for those colds we were getting every year. Event 201 was the proforma for this, where they showed that... October 2019, this was all laid out in Event 201. Jane Halton was there, Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation representative was there. They were planning it all. And during that Event 201, a major thing that came out, was what they were planning, if this happened, how they were going to control the media. They were going to control the media, flood the media with their messaging. They even talked about shutting down the media.

Elizabeth Hart:

And so it has come to pass. They did flood the media with fear-mongering messages, and they have effectively shut the media down, or internet down, because they're censoring people. That's how they're doing it. They're doing it by censoring people. So that Event 201 is a major event that has to be revisited to see what they were planning there. And that only a few months later, they carried out that plan. And they've ended up with this massive industry response to this virus, which is just creating massive amounts of income for the pharmaceutical industry and its investors, the most huge amount of transfer of wealth to these people. And it's not just that, it's taking money away from other areas.

Elizabeth Hart:

So not only have we been locked down and suppressed and frightened and made to wear masks, and all of this sort of stuff, they've taken all this money away, and then it's money that is not in other health areas, that might've been much more beneficial. It's massive theft that has gone on, and it's been facilitated by 'our' elected representatives. Huge scandal. We need some massive international court to take this on, if we can find it.

Iris Richter:

Well, we might have to make one that doesn't have any connection to the pharmaceutical industry.

Elizabeth Hart:

Well I think we'd all be a lot healthier without the pharmaceutical industry, quite frankly. They are causing so much damage with all these medical interventions, just one upon the other.

Iris Richter:

When I was younger, the military spending was always the biggest block and in way below that everything else. And now it's pharmaceuticals, is the biggest, more than military, I think twice as much even.

Elizabeth Hart:

Well, they used to call it the military industrial complex. It's now the medical industrial complex. It's taken over.

Iris Richter:

It's not military, really, because it's a war against the people. I mean, what are we going to do now, segregate people into those who want to take the vaccine, who trusts something that can't find no proof on, and lock those out who are not willing to subject to this? What are we going to do? Keep the people who don't want vaccine out of schools and shops and everything? We'll just starve them in the countryside, or...

Elizabeth Hart:

That's what they seem to be trying to do. And they're causing this division between people. They're trying to create this polarisation, like they did with 'the anti-vaxxers' and 'the pro-vaxxers', trying to marginalise people who challenge the status quo. And now they're doing the same thing. They've got a whole lot of people who don't know a lot of stuff that we know, and they're being made to turn against people who are questioning the vaccines. They're creating this polarization in our society. So they're trying to fragment our society and split us apart. That is not good government.

Elizabeth Hart:

We have not got good governments. They are not looking out for our best interests. There's something going on that they've been hijacked, they're carrying out the World Economic Forum's agenda, and Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation. There's something unbelievably sinister going on, and people have to wake up to this. We have to find some way to get people to understand there's something very serious going on.

Elizabeth Hart:

But you have got to question mandated medical interventions... And these will effectively be mandated, the way they're trying to set this up, that we're just being coerced into it, that you're not going to be able to live your life unless you kowtow to what they want. But it's so obvious that we can question this. Once you know a few things like we do, it's so obvious that we can question it.

Elizabeth Hart:

Just the fact that most people are not affected by this virus. That is documented, but they have used the media so well to frighten people, including our taxpayer-funded media. Particularly the SBS. SBS has been really caught into this attacking anti-vaxxer thing for quite a few years now. They've been a major part of this. Somehow they have been taken in by... And there might be groups like we've got SAVN, Friends of Science in Medicine in Australia. They're the ones who've been running this agenda against people who question vaccination in any way, trying to silence any discussion.

Elizabeth Hart:

So something really grim has happened. And it's involved also with the universities. The general public would think that we should be able to trust the universities and the doctors and the professors. But we can't, because they've got so many conflicts of interest, that this has to be blown apart. We've got this peer-reviewed literature. We've got these medical journals, that people are looked up to, they're on this pedestal. But they're not, they've got vested interests. They're conflicted. We have to say, these things are just magazines. They're making money out of selling these magazines, basically.

Elizabeth Hart:

And the industry is using these journals to launder their trials through them. They get their trial data published in these journals and all of a sudden it's held up and it's used to affect policy. And the next thing we have, is a vaccine on the schedule, paid by us, on the schedule. We have to look at the TGA. The TGA is a regulator. People again, will think, "Oh, the TGA it's checking on everything. It's running trials." It's not. It's relying on manufacturers' data. The TGA is funded by industry. I mean, hello, it's funded by industry, it's funded by the people it's supposed to be checking on. How can that work? That's just not working. Again. The public doesn't realise that. The public doesn't realise what's going on there, that it's conflicted.

Elizabeth Hart:

Now you've got Brendan Murphy, assured people in Australia that these covid vaccines were fully approved by the TGA. He categorically said that on the Leigh Sales' 7.30 program on the ABC. That was actually a lie, because the vaccine products have only got provisional approval. And the TGA is relying on data coming in from the manufacturers overseas and also what's happening in the community, people being vaccinated in the community.

Elizabeth Hart:

So when these people are being lined up for these shots, are they being told that they're actually part of a massive experiment, a massive trial? Are they being told that the manufacturers are being protected from liability? I don't think so. Are these young people who are going to be pressed to have these vaccines, are they being told that they're not actually at risk of this covid themselves? They're not being properly informed at all. And the doctors are part of this.

Elizabeth Hart:

So this is terrible, what's happening. And there are young people today in South Australia... They said, they're rolling out today in regional South Australia, 16 years. From 16 years, they're going to get pressed to have the covid vaccines. What might that mean for them, to be put onto these vaccines for life, when they didn't even need them? It's not until you're older, with co-morbidities... Even then it's not a death sentence to get covid. Particularly if we had any truth on the real numbers of 'cases' and deaths, if that was really being investigated.

Elizabeth Hart:

So we have to call a halt to this. We have to somehow say, "There's got to be moratorium put on all this. We've got to check this out, because this has gone out of hand. And now, particularly when you're pushing these products on people who are not at risk. You've already vaccinated the people who are at risk, or who wanted them. You've done that. Stop it now. Do not push this on other people. Because it's absolutely wrong to do that."

Iris Richter:

Yeah. So since it's got gene technology in it, the Gene Technology Regulator office in Canberra has had a look at this and done a safety evaluation. And they found it to be of probably low risk to the people who didn't get the vaccine and the environment.

Elizabeth Hart:

Didn't get the vaccine?

Iris Richter:

Yeah, exactly. So I'm reading this, and I'm like, "Hang on a minute, but you're not actually looking at the people who get the vaccine, right?"

Elizabeth Hart:

Yeah.

Iris Richter:

It's excellent. If I want to see whether the kitchen is dirty, I just look out the window, "No, it's fine. It's absolutely plain, bright blue sky."

Elizabeth Hart:

There's a lot... We've just got to look into it, but we haven't got people working on our behalf. Everybody, just seems that these people in power are just all about making us have that vaccine. That's why it's not just about the vaccine. They want the power to vaccinate everybody. They want to have these vaccine passports. They want to have them around the world. They want to have us in a sort of net, that we're all tied into this system. And then whether they will start adding other things in that we're all tied into this system... We have to just look into this. People don't realise what can be going on here. It's bigger than just the vaccines. Why do they want to vaccinate everybody in the world against a virus which is not a threat to most people? Who is using this as an excuse, and why are they doing it? Why are they expecting us to do QR codes everywhere we go, that we have to be under surveillance everywhere we go? Why are they testing healthy people all the time, and having people in fear of being locked up, even when they're not sick?

Elizabeth Hart:

If there was a serious virus out there, that people were really scared of, people would take their own steps to protect themselves. Now, if people have got a high viral load and they're sick, they're not going to be up to going out. They'll be home. It's natural what people would have done. People would have naturally stayed home, most people would have done that. It wouldn't have been spread like this.

Elizabeth Hart:

Instead they've created this massive problem of subjecting everybody to being isolated or shut down for... It's just crazy what they've done, this isolation. They threw out the plans that they had. There were already plans in place. They threw those all out the window when this happened. In previous plans, they did not recommend doing any of this isolation and what have you. They specifically didn't recommend doing that, because they knew it would have major economic problems for people.

Elizabeth Hart:

But now, this time, they went ahead with this, just on a whim, without any proper thought. In England they followed this Ferguson report, and he's part of SAGE. It seems like they followed that plan without evaluating the downside. They didn't even think about that, what the downsides would be. Now they're saying that people are too scared to come out because they did such a successful job of frightening people. There are a lot of people who are too frightened to go out.

Elizabeth Hart:

There are people like Lord Sumption. You've probably heard of Lord Sumption in England. He was this retired judge. He was railing against lockdown, absolutely vehemently. But when it came to the vaccine, he was ready to accept the vaccine for people, even people... He was ready to accept it, and why? Because it would help people to come out and go back to the theatre, and things like that. It was almost like, he was willing for people to be subjected to a medical intervention, just to give them confidence. Not because they needed it, or that it was going to save people, but just to get... That's just outrageous, to think that you can put in place a medical intervention for that reason.

Elizabeth Hart:

Peter Hitchens was the same... Peter Hitchens is a famous columnist in England. He was absolutely anti the lockdown, he was over the top about it. He ended up accepting the vaccine. He didn't have the vaccine because he was afraid, he just took the vaccine because he thought it would help things get back to normal.

Elizabeth Hart:

They haven't thought about what they're doing, what they're putting in place here, that they're setting up young people and babies to be vaccinated for life. They're not thinking about that. And I think that's what really hit me too about this situation, was old people. Old people have not given a thought to young people. They mainly seem to be thinking about themselves and not really thinking about the repercussions for young people, what this has meant for young people. Apart from the fact that in England, children weren't even going to school, they were being isolated, they have to wear masks in school. All of this was...when they did get back to school, they had to wear masks. They're having to be tested regularly, every week. All of these impositions are being put on children. Old people didn't go through these sort of experiences when they were young. And most importantly, they're not thinking about the consequences of children being vaccinated for life, and what that might mean, actually stealing their own natural immunity.

Elizabeth Hart:

And there was something that came out. It was at the end of 2019 actually, at the World Health Organization's vaccine safety conference. There was a presentation by Heidi Larson. She's an anthropologist, and she's in charge of the vaccine confidence project. And this is a Big Brother organisation that is monitoring vaccine hesitancy. So in other words, she's 'marketing', she's about pushing and protecting these vaccines. But in her plenary lecture at this conference, she said that we have created something now. We have created a world that is dependent on vaccines. That's what she said. And I thought, "Do you even understand what you've said? You're trying to make people dependent on vaccines, when so many people don't need to be made dependent on vaccines, that they've got their own natural immunity."

Elizabeth Hart:

We just have to stop now, and think about what's going on. It's gone completely out of control. I don't know if it's too far gone now. We don't know what's going to happen to these children in future. You think of the children of today who are four or five years old, the amount of vaccines that they're getting, the amount of aluminium-adjuvanted vaccines they're getting, such as the HPV vaccine. They're getting an enormous aluminium load. And this is not just about the quantity of the aluminium. Each time they get an aluminium-adjuvanted vaccine, that aluminium is in there to create an inflammatory response. It's not so much about the quantity of the aluminium, it's about the fact that each time they have one of those vaccines, it's creating an inflammatory response. What is that doing to them? What is that doing to them, possibly setting them up for autoimmune disease in the future?

Iris Richter:

Yeah, and [crosstalk 00:53:36] we've known for about a hundred years, at least since Dr. William [Tibbetts 00:53:41], wrote on aluminium, and many other doctors did in the twenties of the last century, and proposed this to the Congress in America. It was widely known that aluminium should never be injected, because it causes neurological diseases. However, right now, at the University of Tasmania here, we've got a study going on into the causes of dementia. And when you ask them to maybe look at aluminium too, "No, we're not looking at aluminium."

Elizabeth Hart:

They don't want to know about it. You know Christopher Exley? He's been investigating this area for years, and they're shutting him down. They're strangling him. They're trying to stop him getting funding. It's appalling. This is Keele University. They're just trying to stifle him. And this is very important.

The interview ceased here due to a technical hitch, but Iris and I plan to follow up on this and discuss aluminium-adjuvanted vaccine products further at another time soon.
